The Seeds of Rebellion

The story begins with the escalating tensions between Great Britain and its American colonies. Children will learn about the Stamp Act, the Boston Tea Party, and the Intolerable Acts, as they set the stage for a clash that would forever alter the course of history.

The Shots Heard 'Round the World

On April 19, 1775, British Regulars marched on Lexington and Concord to seize colonial supplies. At Lexington Green, the first shots were fired, marking the official start of the American Revolution.

Children will follow the colonists as they fought bravely against the overwhelming British force, using every available resource to protect their homes and freedom.

Paul Revere's Midnight Ride

No account of the Battles of Lexington and Concord would be complete without the legendary tale of Paul Revere's Midnight Ride. Children will experience the thrill of this perilous journey as Revere raced through the countryside, warning colonists of the impending British invasion.

The Battle of Concord

As the British reached Concord, they faced a determined resistance from colonial militia. The colonists used guerrilla tactics and local knowledge to inflict heavy casualties on the British.

The Long Road to Independence

The Battles of Lexington and Concord served as a catalyst for the American Revolution. They demonstrated the colonists' resolve for independence and earned them the respect of European powers.

Children will learn about the long and arduous struggle that followed, as the colonists fought for and eventually won their freedom from British rule.
