Golf is a game steeped in tradition and etiquette, but there's another side to the sport that's often overlooked: its haunted history. Golf has always been a game played in close proximity to nature, and as such, it has attracted its share of supernatural attention.

In this book, we'll uncover the many ghostly tales and haunted places that have become synonymous with golf. We'll visit the haunted fairways of St Andrews, the eerie greens of Royal County Down, and the mysterious bunkers of Augusta National. We'll hear stories of ghostly caddies, phantom balls, and unexplained phenomena that have plagued golfers for centuries.

Whether you're a golf enthusiast or a fan of the supernatural, this book is sure to fascinate and entertain you. So sit back, relax, and prepare to be spooked by the haunted history of golf.

Chapter 1: The Haunted Fairways of St Andrews

St Andrews is the home of golf, and it's no surprise that it's also home to some of the game's most famous ghosts. The most famous of these is the Green Lady, a phantom who is said to haunt the 17th hole of the Old Course. According to legend, the Green Lady is the ghost of a woman who was murdered on the hole centuries ago. Her ghost is said to appear as a misty figure dressed in a green gown, and she is often seen walking the fairway or searching for her lost golf ball.

Another famous ghost at St Andrews is the White Lady, who is said to haunt the 14th hole of the Old Course. The White Lady is believed to be the ghost of a young woman who drowned in the nearby Swilcan Burn. Her ghost is said to appear as a white figure, and she is often seen walking the fairway or floating above the water.

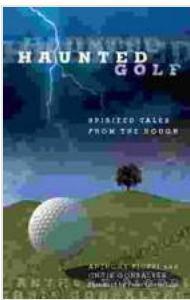

St Andrews is also home to a number of other haunted places, including the Royal and Ancient Golf Club clubhouse, which is said to be haunted by the ghost of a former club member. The clubhouse is also said to be home to a number of poltergeists, which are said to move objects around and cause other disturbances.

Chapter 2: The Eerie Greens of Royal County Down

Royal County Down is one of the most beautiful golf courses in the world, but it's also home to a number of ghostly tales. The most famous of these is the ghost of a former groundskeeper, who is said to haunt the 11th hole. According to legend, the groundskeeper was murdered by a jealous rival, and his ghost is said to appear as a shadowy figure walking the fairway.

Another famous ghost at Royal County Down is the ghost of a young woman, who is said to haunt the 14th hole. The young woman is said to have drowned in the nearby Mourne Mountains, and her ghost is said to appear as a white figure walking the fairway or floating above the water.

Royal County Down is also home to a number of other haunted places, including the clubhouse, which is said to be haunted by the ghost of a former club member. The clubhouse is also said to be
