By Matt Haig

In this heartwarming and thought-provoking book, Matt Haig explores the concept of home and belonging, drawing on his own experiences and the wisdom of others to provide insights into what it truly means to feel at home in the world.

Haig begins by examining the idea of home as a physical place. He writes about the houses and towns he has lived in, and how each one has shaped his sense of identity. He also explores the concept of home as a place of comfort and safety, and how we can create a sense of home even when we are far away from the places we grew up.

But Haig also argues that home is more than just a physical place. It is also a state of mind. Home is where we feel loved and accepted, where we can be ourselves, and where we can find peace and belonging. Haig draws on his own experiences of depression and anxiety to show how even when we feel lost and alone, we can still find home within ourselves.

Ultimately, Haig believes that home is not a destination, but a journey. It is something we create for ourselves, and that we can carry with us wherever we go. With warmth, humor, and insight, Haig offers readers a new perspective on home and belonging.
