Ryan's story is one of resilience, determination, and overcoming obstacles. She grew up in poverty in Baltimore, and her family struggled to make ends meet. But Ryan was always a bright and ambitious child, and she knew that she wanted more for herself.

After graduating from college, Ryan got her start in journalism as a reporter for a local newspaper. She quickly made a name for herself with her hard work and dedication, and she was soon promoted to a White House correspondent.

As a White House correspondent, Ryan has covered some of the most important events in recent history. She has interviewed presidents, covered wars, and reported on major scandals. She has also been the target of racism and sexism, but she has never let that stop her from doing her job.

In Making Scene, Ryan shares her experiences with racism, sexism, and discrimination, and how she used these challenges to fuel her success. She also offers advice for other women who are trying to overcome adversity in their own lives.

Making Scene is a must-read for anyone who is interested in journalism, politics, or simply overcoming adversity. Ryan's story is an inspiration to us all, and it shows that anything is possible if we set our minds to it.

Here are some of the things that you will learn from Making Scene:

- How to overcome racism and sexism
- How to achieve your goals
- How to make a difference in the world
