In a world where society has crumbled and resources are scarce, the lives of ordinary people are turned upside down. Food has become a precious commodity, and the line between survival and starvation is perilously thin.

Anna Jean Mayhew weaves a tale centered around the Morrow family. Nan, the matriarch, is a pillar of strength and resilience, determined to protect her loved ones at all costs. Her husband, Jim, is a pragmatic farmer who struggles to provide for his family in the face of dwindling resources.

Their children, 12-year-old David and 10-year-old Sophie, are forced to navigate the harsh realities of this dystopian world. David, a sensitive and imaginative boy, finds solace in books and dreams of a better tomorrow. Sophie, despite her young age, exhibits an unwavering determination to help her family survive.

Mayhew's writing is both lyrical and devastating. She paints a vivid and immersive world that feels both familiar and utterly foreign. The characters are deeply flawed, yet relatable, and their struggles will resonate with readers long after the final page is turned.

A Tale of Survival and the Importance of Human Connection

'Tomorrow Bread' is more than just a dystopian survival story. It is a poignant exploration of the human spirit and the power of love and connection.
